RIPON AND WOLF RIVER RAIL ROAD .-Those of our merchants and business men who attended the meeting held at the Chamber of Commerce a short time since, in reference to this Rail Road, certainly do not need to be reminded of the great advantages Milwankee must derive from its speedy completion To accomplish that, the committee to whom the matter was referred, have decided that $20,000 will be necessary in addition to the available resources in the hands of the Company. At the meeting in the Chamber of Commerce, the feeling was so strong in favor of the project, that had there been a perfect understanding as to the amount need. ed, we are strongly inclined to think it would have been forthcoming on the spot. So earnest were some gentlemen present at that meeting that the Company should have the necessary means to complete the road, that they declared whatever the amount might be, no matter whether fifty or a hundred thousand dollars it should be raised. It was the impression then that not less than $50,000 would be wanted; a committee consisting mostly of wholesale merehants, was appointed to investigate the whole matter, solicit subscriptions and take charge of the disbursement of the money as proposed by the gentlemen representing the Company.-That committee, after a full consultation with the President of the Company, C. BIGKLOW. Esq, concluded that $20,000 would be amply sufficient to ensure the laying of the iron from Ripon to Lake Winneconne. DAVID ATWOOD, CHARLES HOLT, NORMAN EASTMAN, J. C. CHANDLER, District Committee.

Mabison, June 22d, 1860.

The "Union" Candidate in Trouble. The Richmond Enquirer brings to light a series of resolutions, passed by the Massachusetta Legislature in 1837, asserting the Constitutional power of Congress to abelish slavery in the District of Columbia and to prohibit it in all Territories of the U.S; declaring against the admission of any new Slave State into the Union, and calling for the suppression of the inter-State Slave traffic. The Enquirer publishes, in the same connection, a letter from EDWARD EVERETT expressing his hearty concurrence in these "incendiary" resolutions. The development has carried consternation into the ranks of the "Constitutional Union Party." Think of Mr. EVERETT endorsing the most u'tra "Republican" doctrines and sanctioning direct interference with the "domestic institutions" of the Southern Status! The Enquirer makes much of the discovery, which it parades, as a sort of "raw head and bloody bones" to frighten the Old Dominion into voting for BRECKINEEDGE.

Wendell Phillips on Linesin,

Let no one omit to read the exposure of Lincoln by Wendell Philips, which we publish in this issue. It shows that Lincoln, when in Congress, was as productery as libert, of seath Carolina. Neces, of peatenday.

The News has suddenly "gone about."— Heretofore, it has warmly opposed Lincoln tionist; the real author of the "irrepressible indeed, a beautiful coalition, the News, Wes-DELL PHILLIPS and BROOKS of the N. Y. Express, making common cause against ing of Presidential matters, says:

"The falling off from Douglas of those who have been supposed to be his friends, is an every day occurrence, and in several instances are among leading public men. Gov. Fitzpatrick, Reger A. Pryor, Gov. Johnson, of Tennessee; Gov. Stephens, of Georgia, and others, scarcely less distinguished, are losses which no candidate can afford, who expects to stand well with his party.

losses which no candidate can afford, who expects to stand well with his party. We judge that in no one of the Southern States can Mr. Douglas have the slightest hope of success. At the rate things are now going on, there will be very little encouragement for even the attempt to present him as a candidate in any considerable number of the States south of Mason and Dixon's line."

The Athony Standard parts.

The Albany Standard saye: . : "Judge Douglas will poll a large vote in New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Hilnois,, and other Free States, and yet it is not prob-able that he will carry a single State."

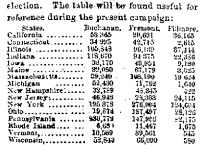

The New York Herald, which seems to rather favor Douglas, while speaking of the course of Mr. Silas Seymoun, is forced to 'Mr. Seymour talks sheer nonsense when he talks of electing Mr. Douglus by the pep-ular vote. If Mr. Silas Saymour cannot comprehend this fact he is an ignoramus in politics who ought to keep quiet; if he does comprehend it, he should speak accordingly. The mere clap trap of confidence and enthusiasm, without anything to show for it, is good for nothing, and goes for nothing."

ANOTHER RECRUIT FOR LINCOLN .- We published, yesterday, the letter of FRANK H. FIRMIN, Chairman of the Dane County Democratic Club, announcing his purpose to vote for Lincoln. The Madison Journal of Thursday brings news of another important accession to the Republican Ranks. It says: "Mr. A. Menges, of this city, an Old-Line German Demoorat, seeing his party di-vided into two pro-slavery factions, each pledged to Federal interference for the protection of slavery in the territories, has come out for Lincoln and Hamlin. Mr. M. was for many years the Assistant Bank Controllor many years the Assistant Bank Controli-er of this State, when the State Government was in the hands of the Democratic Party, and in that position established a high char-acter, both for business espacity and integri-ty. He is well known in the State, and is a popular man with all classes, but especially with his fellow countrymen—the Germans.?

THE FERRIES OF NEW YORK .- From some statistics in The World, we learn that New York has at this time no less than 60 steam ferry boats, whose burden is over 25,000 passengers with accommodations for about 75,000 tons and 700 teams. Nearly 800 men are employed on the bests, while the bridges and ferry houses give employment to about 600 more. 'About 300 are employed in the shops and for repairs. This makes a sum total of nearly 2,000 men who gain a living from the boats belonging to the steam ferries. To pay the employes their monthly wages, the sum of $100,000 is required. The valne of these boats amounts to nearly threequarters of a million dollars, and the annual repairing to them figures up to not far from 60,060. The boats burn about 249 tous of coal per day, or 850,400 tons per year, which item of expense amounts to $1,401,600 in the course of the year.

THE NORTHERN VOTE .- We subjoin the vote of the North at the last Presidential election. The table will be found useful for Missouri Election. - The State Election in Missouri takes place the 1st Monday in August. There are four rival candidates for Governor as follows: - Claim F. Jackson, DENBURE, (Lincoln,) HARCOCK JACKSON, "Gomorrow I shall do myself the honor of "doing" the Great Eastern and the Central Park.

LETTER FROM NEW YORK. Doings of Correspondent.

Correspondence of the Sentinel. NEW YORK, July 17, '60, Who ever undertook to write a narrative of books should always patronize steamboats. Don't you know why? I'll tell you: Phia, and argued several months ago. The Court rattle, bang,-a slice of mountain, two sudden jerks of forest, rocks streaming past, and a dusty conductor, shouting "Tickets, gentlemen." That's railroad travelling. You always encounter a series of towns called "Washington," "Mill Creek," "Junction," and "Jefferson City," and as you only see the same brown depot where all these towns ought to standard is but reasonable that when horse railroad company to use the highways you get to the end of your journey your idea is subject to the right of the public to use of the several places is something like the such highways as they have previously following: "Washunctionjeffermillson."

"cities," swallowed the dust in silence, and promising myself a glorious day of refreshing at "the Falls," put up with railroad DOING THE FALLS.

There is a man from somewhere's in Wales a man who contends that the Garden of granted. Eden was located near Langoltenn, and that Washington was a Welshman,) whom I have met at every visit to the Falls, brought ture, and that, consequently, one day the Suspension Bridge will go down "ker smash" with a passenger train. I met this at the Cataract House. He showed me where mathical account of the certainty of the catastrophe, all of which I put down with the Welsh origin of Washington, for what it was Irishman who drives the hack and shows the objects of interest to strangers. ment that is necessary. You see a ravineincense, floats up over the great whirlpool, while the disposon of the waters is mellowed consisted in accepting bills. pleasantly in reaching you. You then want o go on Goat Island, (where the waters come down worse than they ever did at Lodore,) and look with proper horror at the black speck which the intelligent Irishman tells you is the stone upon which the poor wretch lodged before he went over over, &c.

Having "done" Goat's Island you want to do the whirlpool and the rapids according to the guide books, and pay the man an extra fifty cents for telling you which is which .--Then if your nerves are strong you may go down under the falls and robed in indian rubber, put your fingers in your ears and imagine the whole thing is about to crumble, collapse, and sweep you into that figurative bourne from which nobody ever returned-we mean "the middle of next week." Don't stop to see Brondin out up any capers. It's our support of the Charleston Bultimore nomas a "sectional" candidate; an ultra-aboli- awful. If you value the awe, grandeur, poety and so forth of the place, don't wait to see

DOING THE N. Y. AND ERIE Of course there is not any Railroad in the World like the York and Erie. This has their political creed. On these two platfornes "Honest Old Aba." Here are the represent been said so much that I need at repeat it.

Alps on Alps and potatoe patches; gushing rivulets and corn-fields. I couldn't pretend to write a description of it without borrow. ing some of Brooks' tints; and I wouldn't do it at all for less than a new hat-a thing raiiroad companies never give.

DOING THE ZOUAVES. The first thing I ran against on Broadway, when I got to Mayor Wood's "eternal city," was a string of forty Chicago young men, with flanuel pants on. They didn't all of them nod to me simultaneously, because they recognized me, as I thought at the time;
but because as I they offerward informed understood, from rumor, posters, daily papers, and private friends, that the Chicago Zonaves were to drill in Madison Park, at 3 o'clock. In common with the rest of New York, I went to Madison Park. Found between twenty and forty thousand people there, three hundred of whom were policemen stationed about, to keep the populace from devouring the Zouaves, muskets and all. Those who didn't, were eloquent of what the Zouaves had already done in the Park. One fellow assured another, "that they were all members of the church-were not allowed to drink, chew, cuss, or play billiards-and were not allowed to get married, or 'court,' for the same reason that prize fighters are not allowed to debilitate themselves." Well, at 4 o'clock the forty thousand made rush. The Zonaves entered the southern gate "two by two" - each platoon not quite half a mile apart-and walking about as fast as though the band had been playing "Saint Patrick's Day in the Morning." The ladies saned out of the windows, eyed the red tlaunch and said, "O, how beautiful!" One man looked at their moustaches and said they were all Frenchmen; another told him he lied, and asserted, on top of it, that they were all Chicago counter-jumpers. The rest of the people kept on eating peanuts.

Then they drilled. They formed hollow squares, solid squares, rectangular oblongs, quadrangular ovals, filed, defiled, profiled marched backwards and forwards, stormed several trees, and took them without repulse; loaded their pieces white the Captain beat time; hopped, skipped and jumped. Now they marched as uniform as a rew of pins; now they mixed themselves up until the red flannel looked like a mass of angleworms on the boil, and now they extricated themselves and every man went off on an independent drill of his own. It was all clock-work. They all breathe together, wink together; and when that great brass band stretches, on:

around them, how can they help acting in concert.

The New Yorkers freely acknowledged that they leat even the Seventh Regiment. The people applianded their performance highly, and it only remains for the Chicago ople to raise some more funds for them and they will go on to glory

However well the Zonaves may stand fire, it is certain they could not stand water, th is certain they could not stand water. A thundering shower came up during the drill in Madison Park, and they performed a retreat to the Fifth Avenue Hotel that would have elicited a bravo from Xenophon himself.

Unsaimous and Earliusia; tie Nomination of the Bun, John Sherman-Wide awakes and Lincoln Unibs Out-ur, Sherman's Speech.

From the Ginelanuti Commercial.

SHELDY, O., July 17.

A committee was appointed to wait on Mr. Sherman and apprise him of his nonlination, and request him to address the mass Convention in the grove after dinner.
This after noon the crowd, numbering from sion to the grove, headed by Wide-Awakes and Lincoln Clubs from Mansa-ld, Sandus-Washington was a Welshman,) whom I horse rainroad, which cannot deviate from and Lincoln Ulubs from Mansfield, Sandusher by a firm conviction that iron expands and shrinks with the variations of temperature, from using it as they had previously received with a round of cheers, and spoke as follows: foliows: MR SHERMAN SEPRECH.

Mr. Sharman returned his thanks to the gentlemen of the Convention. It was not merely that for the fourth time they nomina-ted bin at their Representative in Congress, but that each time their choice had been made with a warmth and ununimity that demanded and received his deepest gentitude. NEW READONSIDILITIES OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

Since they met here two years ago, the R -publican party had assumed new responsi-bilities. Hitherto in National politics it had a. But during the last winter, duty required it to assume an affirmative policy.

THE SPEAKELSHIP CONTEST. In the House of Representatives the Republican formed much the strongest party in numbers, unity and organization, but it had numbers, unity and organization, but it had not a majority. It had to meet two distinct parties—the Americans and Democrats—but they were divided into numerous factions, united only by a common hostility to the Republican party. Unfortunately they had, in the House, a few men, elected mainly by that Mr. William H. Russhil, formerly of Republican votes, who had neither the cour Republican votes, who had neither the courage, or hoursty, to not with them, or with their only natural adversaries, the Democratic party. Under this state of facts without a formal conference, the Republican Representatives determined that there should be a Republican organization of the Committees, or that the hostile factions opposed to them, should be compelled to note and take the responsibility of an organization upon themselves. They would neither buy nor sell, barker nor exchange. They had a future to look to, as white test and the first series of the Republican party selected its candidate for Speaker, and took its position—With manly and dignified firmness it maintained it. The faction combined its unbroken column in vain. They were like the With manly and displied firmness it maintained it. The faction combined its unbroken column in vain. They were like the French squares, at the battle of pyramids, with the Mameriakes all round them. Distunctions, with treasmalle threats upon their turgues, railed and scotled like garmlors without when All the will of order and the lous women. All the rules of order and de-counts which form the common law oren of a mass meeting in your strong, were disre-garded by a Democratic glock holding over from the last Congress. The vilest language of the grog-shop was transferred to your Con-gressional records. A revolutionary comis-nation was no red into to provid a majority of the House from prescribing rules for its government. All these expedients were sanc-

of the highest character, who had steadily voted for the numinee of the Republicans—that moment disregarding all personal preference, or the pride of personal success, artry Republican Representative voted for into, He said with entire sincerity, and they knew him well enough to know whether he spoke traly or not, that it was a happy mospoke traip or not, that it was a happy motaent to him when he could contribute to the triumph of the flepublican Party by the voluntary surrender of a distinction of which any man might be proud. He knew that some of them, and many Republican members of Congress, thought he did wrong in withdrawing his name, but he thought different, but now he knew he did right. No man is of sufficient importance to stand for a man is of sufficient importance to stand for a inchement in the way of the success of a great cause like that of the Republican party. It was doubtful if the experiment would prove successful, for some who promised, faltered, It was the decisive vote of a gallant son of daryland—a man of culture, ability

Maryiand—a man of conture, active number of the near man he would not exchange for all the cringing Democrats that misrepresent the Northern States—it was the vote of Henry Winter Davis that decided the strug-

THE POLICY OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY IN THE HOUSE. They had a Republican Speaker and a R-publican majority on every important Committee, and what was the result ! Did war come ! Did Disunion come ? Were any of he institutions of their lathers jeopardized the institutions of their lathers jeopardized or overthrown? Oh, not they might point with pride to the record made by a Republican House of Representatives. The petition of the people of Kunsas for somission as a free State, with a constitution samistioned by her people, was promptly and favorably acted upon. A liberal homestead bill, securing to make the defendence of the transfer of the trans to the second of a family a portion of the pub-lic domain for cultivation, was promptly sent to the Sanate. A simple provision of law to withhold the public lands for the years from the greed of speculators followed soon after. That stain upon the national honor, the adul-terons, reading a following in Title was terous practice of polygamy in Utah, was made a penal offence. The slare code of New Mexico, passed to please a few Democratic office holders there—together with an inhoome holders there—together with an inhu-man law regulating or rather rendering more barbarous the prace of seridom, were rapeal-ed in pursuance of the express power re-served to Gongless by the act organizing. New Mexico. A carefully prepared flavence Law was passed, which, while it provided revenue for the support of the government, did it in a way least burdensome to the people, and most serviceable to the industrial interests of the country. A said sometime was testion-d most service to the industrial interests of the country. A rigid scrutiny was instituted into some branches of expenditures, and the most corrupt, demoralizing practices, reach-ing even to the President, were disclosed. And last, but not least, a large and radical reduction of the expenses of the Government was effected. After a careful examination of the country stimute for the post results. the annual estimates for the next year, the House of H-presentatives reduced them : House of R-presentatives reduced them to $48,000,000, so that if the action of the House had been sanctioned by the Senate, the estim expenditure next year, exclusively of the public debt, would have been $48,000,000 expended one year ago. Even in the face of a determined effort of a Democratic Senate, the appropriations for all other purposes, other than the public debt, was reduced to about $50,000,

Why are not all these wise measures now the law of the land? It is because an in-tense sectionalism, based upon the labor of slaves, has still possession of all other pow-ers of the government except the House of Representatives It is because a Democratic President and a Democratic Senate have had the power to defeat each and all these measures. THE REPUBLICAN PARTY NOW. He congratulated them upon the progress it is certain they could not stand water. A thundering shower came up during the drill in Madison Park, and they performed a retreat to the Fifth Avenue Hotel that would have elicited a bravo from Kenophon himself.

From Harper's Magazine. THE CHAPEL CHORISTERS.

BY ALICE B. NEAL, "Gioria in expelsis" rang through the lit-"Giora in expenses" rang urrough are the chapel in a clear volume of sound that rose above the accompaniment of the organ, and was just shaded and softened by the flatelike tenor that accompanied that single features are some male voice.

Many of the sun browned scamen who worshipped there knew the voice and the worshipped there knew the voice and the singer, and listened the more carnestly, because of her, to chants and psalms, and the sermon that followed. It was "English Besaie," who came among their wives and children on many a kindly errand, and had always a cheerful word for the sick and dedictions which was a cheerful word for the sick and dedictions on the sick and since the form the monotonic that the monoton ane," who came among their wives and children on many a kindly errand, and had always a cheerful word for the sick and desponding. The men called her "a hearty lass," and wished many a "blessing on her happy face." Their wives, in Sunday dress and proud of the stalwart arms on which they always the stalwart arms on which they armed "the hearty" the stalwart arms. leaned, "thought it a shame" that she had not chosen from among the rough and har-dy wooers by which she was surrounded. Prayer and chant were over, and the still sermon time came, when Bessie's duties were ended; and she drew the crimson curtain aside, to look and listen to the rest.—

The stout figure displeased a could make his mind.

The collection of the rest.—

The collection of the rest. The warm summer sun came quivering from the sea through the lace shaped windows, and lighted up the pate, grave face of the olergyman in his putpit, and the strangelyzathered audience. Some were boatmen, or hands from coastng ressels, whose occupation allowed them eisure for home and its comforts. They were surrounded by their wives and little ones in all the smartness of the Sunday costume, relieved by scarfs or shawls of bright foreign weaving, the gift of some successful relative on a return voyage. The children sat measily on the high benches, and looked at the flies on the window, or studied the pictures in their prayer broks, as children will. These were the more regular attendants of the chapel. Beyond them, the trim blue jacket of a man-of-war's man was the contented neighbor of some "inbberly whaler," in ordinary intercourse a special aversion. And there were men whose dress had no pretension of Sunday meatness, who searcely knew one day of the week from another, except that the seventh was, in some another, except that the seventh was, in some sort, a day of rest even with the hardest captains under whom they sailed, who were there they acarely knew how or why, from idle whim or vague curiosity to hear the music, or "what the parson would have to say," gathered literally from the high-ways and by ways, and compelled to come in.

There were unusual sights and sounds for church-goers without. Now loud oaths or snatches of a sailor-song from some group strolling along the wharves; then a hiss of steam, a flitting past of steamers, as the Sunday pleasure-boats left on their crowded hourly trips down the bay. B-lls rang and dogs barked; nen laughed or shouted with coalse, unseemly merriment at courser jests; the chapel rocked and swayed in the swell of arriving or departing vessels, and a steady, of arriving or departing vessels, and a steady, glaring heat struck upon the small organ-left, whose occupants were familiar with all this, in the disclarge of their self-appointed duty. Heat and cold were alike to them, so ong as they could lead in the "common praise" and respond to the "common pray-er" of those in whom they thus evinced un-tiring interest—English Bessie, for the sake of the father and brother, buried by one wave from the same wreck, and the blind man at her side, whose white hands drew auch noble music from the organ's keys, while he sang the pure, clear tenor of which we spoke.

He sat with his face turned towards Bessie, as if his sightless eyes longed to know the features of his familiar friend, whom he had never yet seen. His long hair, thrown backwards from a forehead that had never seen exposure, touched the broad linen coi lar, turned over a simple ribbon, tied care-lessly about the throat. His dress was simple, and far from now, but neat—so neal that you wondered to know if a woman's hand not arranged it. Music was atonce his Price 25 cts. It was a singular friendship that had grown up between these two, who met not elsewhere; and when the sermon was dene it was pleasant to see the staterly cars with which she handed him his staff and hat, and which she handed him his staff and hat, and ted him down the narrow stairs, where he must have groped slowly but for her hands. "Here is the sill, Richard," she said, "and here the door; and there is the rector, wanting to speak with you. But the quick ear of the blind man dis-cyvered another step, and though he listen-ed to the kindly words of the grave rector, he heard an invitation given and refused, where Bassie stood at the door of the vestibule. "What did he want?" asked Richard, in the quick, excited manner peculiar to him, as his hand was once more placed in that firm, reliant clasp, as she led him over the swaying plank to the shore. "Stady! There, now you are on the wharf," Bessie said, as she might have soothed an excited child. "Who? What? Allen?" Allen?"

"Yes, Allen. I heard his voice when Mr

"Tes"—and she laughed pleasantly—"but you know them as well as I do. You could lead me here."
"I wish I could!" he answered below his breath, for the blindness was still a dark horror to him. "But Allen—""
"He only asked abeut to-night, if I should go to the chanel, and------ "If he could walk with you. When are you going to be married?" he added abruptly.

But Bessie only pushed out a loose round stone in the crossing as if she did not hear the question.
"Mother's not so well to day, and I cannot go so far as usual," she said, as they entered a narrow crocked street. "How bright and pleasant it must look out at the Asylum, with all the roses in bloom!"

"Yes, if one could see them!"
"Richard, you are not thankful to-night for what you can enjoy," said the young girl carnestly. "You have a cheerful home and earnestly. "You have a cheerful home and a fresh, sweet-scented air, and cheerful society."

"Go on Bessie. You mean—while you are shut up in this close street with a sick mother, and your bread to gain by your needle. But then there is Allen!" and the gloomy tone come back again.
"Let him be there," Bessie answered decidedly, pausing at her own door-stone—"Richard, you ang Benedic anima mea' this afternoon; remember it on your way for her. Take cate now and look out for the cearriages and crossings. I shall have time for a practice hour on Wednesday evening.—You may come to tea if you like.?!

The blind man's staff rang upon the pavement as he went on his lonely way, not knowing that she stood upon the door stone, and watched for his safety so long as he was in sight. He did not know what should and watched for his safety so long as he was in sight. He did not know what should make him so restless and disturbed about this marriage. It was right and natural, and what he could have wished for Bessie. They would be finely paired, the high-spirited, energetic woman and her sailor-lever; he so tall and bronzed and stalwart, as Bessie's husband ought to be; frank and generous, as sailors ever are.

band ought to be; frank and generous, as sailors ever are.

Richard Langdon, the blind music teacher, still lived in the Asylum, where he had studied his beautiful art, with the love and confidence of pupils and teachers. The rooms were of noble proportions, the ground fragrant with sweet-seemed shrubs, and cool with the shadow of heavy foliage. Here he walked that still Subbath afternoon, and theoretic norm his similars, iowless childhood REEP COOL.

My 84 thought upon his simisss, joyless childhood, to cheer it. There were many hours when his mind preyed upon itself. It had always been so in the pauses of sindy, but never so much as now.

So he wandered down the rose walk, lietening to the murmur of voices that rose from the play-ground beyond the gard-n, and carrying the children their Sabbath rest and peace. But his mind would go back to Bessle and their first acqueintance, when she came to offer her fresh, strong, but untrained voice, to assist him to lead in the chapel music. his nature was so gentle, that her quick stirring way was not pleasant to him at first; it was not his idea of womanliness. He liked her better when he found how much in ear nest she was to improve this one talent, and how grateful for his instructions. Now, when they were together, he laid aside the timid uncertainty of st-p and manner, trusting to her guidance. When she was married, all these pleasant walks and rehearsals must-end, for she would have new duties and companionship and pleasures. No wonder he was restless and disturbed.

The pale central widors had a sudported for The pale, gentle widow had a welcome for him when the appointed evening came; and he sat down near her, in the open door, un-til Bessie should come in He could feel the the the treatment of the treatment of the treatment of the cat purring on the door-sill, and the kettle singing its pleasant evening song in the outer room. It was all so still and homelike to him, though he had never known a home but in his dreams; so different from the clatter of feet through the corridors of the Asylum, the opening and shutting of doors, the hum of children coming their lyssons, or the discordance of the tortured musical instruments under the hands of unkiliful pupils. He wondered if the gay, soleterous sailor would appreciate this quiet rest, so dear to him, and Bessie's invalid mother, with her delicate tastes and instincts. When ten was over and the household duties ended for the day, though it was pleasant to hear Beaste going so easily about them, she came, for the first thue, and set down by him on the door-stone; for the house was one of those low, old-fashioned tenements where you step from the street into the dwelling room at once. The street was still and deserted, save now and then a solitary footdeserted, save now and then a softary foot-geep school along the pavement and died away in the shadows beyond. A massive but long disned warehouse, built when this narrow street had its great commercial fame and influence, loomed opposite to them, the iron-bound door and shatterless ed children quarreiting on the pavement -To night it was especially pleasant to see it so soully shadowed; and she described it to the blind man as one would have drawn the picture of a friend. And she could not draw a portrait of herself that satisfied him. She always turned away with some jest upon her stout figure and heavy features, which displeased and annoyed him, for he never could make her anything but beautiful in

as mind. "I will ask her now," thought Richard "before any one has a claim upon her;" and with quick impulse, he preferred a long-in-dulged, but unspoken request. "If you will only let me touch your hair-your face one instant, Bessie, as I do, when I wish to know my friends and pupils better, I shall be more contented when you are Allen's wife—you have been such a dear, true friend to me, "

She took up both his hands, and stooping, ind them on her bowed head.

"As I thought," he murmured rather than spoke; and his hands shook and trambled, though she was so quiet beneath their touch.

"Sout, wavy hair; it is brown I know, hrown and siken as a citit's. The broad nown. and silken as a child's. The broad, open forehead, that belongs to you, Bessie. I know how your eyes look now, honest and fearless and very truthful; such long lashes, and your cheek so round and smooth! How could you tell me that you were not beautiful?"

"Because I am not," she said, taking his hands again. "And feel how hardened my hands are, while yours are soft and white.— It is an ugly contrast; and so are our faces and they walked on towards the river, for the chapel was scarcely a stone's throw. He longed to say more—to tell her all that the touch of that bowed head had revealed to him—how passionately be loved her—how doubly hateful his blindness and dependence were to him for her sake-how doubly solitary his life would always be for having known her, and for her care over him; but he struggled with this stormy mood bravely. for he knew he had no right to lay the bur den of his misfortunes at any woman's foot, even if she were free to take it up and bear it onward for him. So, they walked on in silence for a little time, until they began to hear the softsplash of the incoming tile against the wharves and the sides of the vessels lying at anchor. It recalled the trim schooner Bess and her cap-tain to his mind.

"When are you to be married?" he asked abrupily. "Soon, I hope."

"Do you, Richard?" "Yes, it is better to be soon," and again the strong tide of feeling rushed to his lips. He pressed his teeth into them, so that he should say no more.
"Well, them," said Bessie, her voice tremfor you love me as Allen does not and can not, and you need me more than he, as told him when he asked me to be his wife ! "I, Bessie! Poor and blind! I your husband!" He reeled as if a sudden blow had been struck, but she upheld him steadily.

If you do not wish it, Richard, it ends here. You know me well enough in these three years to know that I mean all I say, and that I had only to assure myself of your love before I allowed mine to be seen. would never have asked this of me; but here I am. I offer myself, my love and companionship to you, if you will take it. Richard, let me be home and strength and sight to you always.¹³

It was well that they had reached the chapel, for the courage with which she had nerved herself was tast forsaking her. By the dim light, she saw their rector bending over his books in the vestry, as was his wont when he expected them there. The blind man heard the advancing step and kindly welcome, as he came forward to the chancel, and the sound of other voices in the loft above them.
"Make it real! it is all a dream," he "Make it real! it is an a cream, assid; and they knelt down together for their pastor's blessing, for he knew all that was in their hearts, and that henceforth the chant of thanksgiving would come from the innermost depts of Richard Langdon's goul: "Who crowneth me with mercy and lov-

lo the trade at Chicago of bester than a million bush-eis annually, and an annual gain in the trade at Mil-waukee of more than that amount? We imagine so, because any allusion to the subject would naturally lead to an explanation of the courses that have brought about this worderful change, and if you told the lruth you would have to state them as follows: 1st. Milwaukoe is the largest "primary" wheat market in the world, and in that respect offers advantages as a wheal market that Chicago does not possess. 2d. Milwaukes is ninely miles neaver the great wheat growing sections of the North-West than Chieago, and the same distance nearer the Atlantic seaboard. These are advantages which no rivalry can ever overcome. Chicago is not located in precisely the right place to become the wheat market of the North-West. Milwankee is.

And furthermore, wheat shipped from Milwan-kee invariably brings better prices in Eastern and Euro-pean markets than that shipped from any other port on Lake Michigan. Chicago shippers so fully appreciate this fact that they have frequently used our means and paimed off their whicat on Eastern buyers as "Mil-marks," (M. 1977). The control of Milwan admissibility wankie Club." The Press & Tribune acknowledge ed the prevalence of this swindling trick last season, and openly reprobated it.

We might multiply minor advantages which Milwaukee possesses as a wheat market, but the above are sufficient. In view of these facts does anybody honestly suppose that a million bushels of the surplus wheat of Minnesota this season will go to Chicago, while Minnesota can flud a market ninety miles nearer home? Chicago will do very well as a market for poor wheat, because the bulk of the wheat received there comes from a section of country that does not produce as good wheat as Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iows or Northern Illinois, and hence any which we are offering at prices that dely competition

This, too, is me, and the main reason way Milwaukee gets a large share of the wheat raised in Northern Illinois, although not possessing equal railroad facilities in that secti with Chicago, the quality of that wheat being about as good as our Wisconsin wheat. Is it not more likely therefore, that instead of Chicago getting a million hushels of this zeason's wheat crop from Minnesota, that Milwaukee, as heretofore, will get the whole surplus of hat State that is shipped by railroad, and will have her wheat trade still further augmented by about a mil-lion bushels more than any previous season from the

By the middle of next week, most of the wheat will be fully matured, and ready for the granter. The weather has been and is now remarkably favorable born for ripening and for gathering. It is warm, dry and steady, with little or no prospect of a storm, though for some crops a cool and gentle rain is destrable.

Taking into calculation the larger number of acres

the mark, in our opinion.—Eo, Sentenel.)

Taking into calculation the larger number of acres sown and the increase this year both in quantity and quality, we do not think we estimate the yield this year too high if we place it at 15,000,000 of bus. In fact, those who have taken pairs to get the best information on this point, place it as a still larger figure. In this immediate vicinity, thirty bushels to the acre will be the average growth. At least so we have been told by many farmers, who have had good opportunities to form a correct judgment in this respect. It is a great achievement of inquistry for a State to double its production of a staple like wheat in one-year, yet it has chievement of industry for a State to double its pro-tection of a staple like wheat in one year, yet it has seen done by the agriculturists of Wisconsin. May the demand for their breakings be such as will secure a remanerative reward to the cultivators of the soil.— Watertown Democrat.
